the feet, ten minutes. No. 1 electrode, base of brain in A, a convenient large electrode placed under the hands in C, ten minutes. Perspiration should be induced as speedily as possible, and the body greased, thoroughly and constantly, with cocoanut oil, if it can be procured.

If the throat becomes very sore, apply the spatula electrode to the tongue in F, the sponge-cup in A, rubbed forward on both sides of the throat, five minutes each side.

Treatments every hour until change for the better, unless the patient sleeps. Quiet, and an even temperature, must be observed in the apartment of patient. Children in household kept out of the room, and sanitary measures taken to prevent contagion.

MEASLES.

When the first symptoms, watery eyes, rasping cough, and fever, appear, regulate the temperature of the room to about seventy-five degrees, avoiding draughts.

Place No. 1 electrode to base of brain in B, and No. 5 electrode on the lower part of spine in C, fifteen minutes; then place No. 1 electrode on throat in A, and No. 6 electrode under feet in C, strong enough to be felt by patient, fifteen minutes. Repeat this treatment three times daily. Alternate with B–D and C–E in the same manner.
